

FELLS SIX WHO SAY 'CAR AHEAD'

Modest Hero, After Knocking Down Elevated's Minions in Vindication of His Rights, Departs Unidentified.

The truly great are proverbially modest, as witness the little man who demonstrated the courage of his convictions when confronted with the "car ahead" proposition on the Fifty-ninth street "L" station early to-day. After venting his indignation against the company's rules on the train crew and station corps, he moved silently away into the darkness of the night and left an enthusiastically sympathetic public in ignorance of his heroic identity.

One of the countless irritations of the city's transportation problem is the rule making all passengers on the Ninth avenue division of the "L" get out at Fifty-ninth street after midnight and take the Harlem train of the Sixth avenue uptown.

A stockily-built little man was the only passenger on the Ninth avenue train which ran into Fifty-ninth street at 9 o'clock this morning. "All out!" shouted the guard. The passenger asked what was the matter. He was informed with all the Chesterfieldian polish of the "L" guard dialect. Still he couldn't understand. "Gwan, now; git 'till out'n here!" said the guard, moving forward to shake him. The little man's fist shot out and the guard went down in a heap. The conductor ran in, and a punch sent him sprawling to the platform. The little man then walked out and asked the ticket chopper why he had to get out. In a moment he was surrounded by the motorman, the ticket chopper, the agent, two guards and the conductor. When he asked for information he was told he was going to be arrested.

Agent as Club. He said nothing, but grabbing the agent, a dapper little chap, by the legs, he swung him like a scythe and mowed down the opposing force until his five opponents lay sprawling along the platform. Then he dropped the agent like a stuffed club and moved quickly down the steps. The motorman picked himself up and whistled vigorously for the police, but before a bluecoat had in sight the little man had boarded an Amsterdam avenue car and was on his way uptown.

Shortly before this the "car ahead" nuisance had caused another rumble in the street below between two passengers and the motorman and conductor of a Columbus avenue car.

Had No Transfers. It is customary after midnight to make passengers leave the Ninth avenue surface cars at Fifty-fourth street and board the Columbus avenue cars, for which they are provided with transfers. Samuel H. Adams, of No. 231 Broadway, and Philip L. Miller, of No. 436 West Seventy-first street, noticed that the conductor did not issue transfers last evening, and spoke of it.

He said everything would be all right, but when they boarded the Columbus avenue car and said they had not been given tickets, they were told they would have to pay or get off. They refused. The conductor stopped the car at Fifty-ninth street and tried to eject them. He threw Mr. Miller to the ground, took a fence racket away from him and beat him over the head with it. Mr. Adams had a scuffle with the motorman who used his brass knuckles as a weapon against which Mr. Adams fought with a roll of manuscript. A policeman arrested the passengers, but let the trainmen go. When the desk sergeant of the West Forty-seventh street station this he ordered both gentlemen released.

CLERGYMEN'S SON SENT TO BELLEVUE.

His Mother and Sister Say in Court that He Was Minded.

Schuyler Chamberlain, son of the Rev. John Chamberlain, of No. 347 West One Hundred and Fifty-fifth street, pastor of St. Anne's Church for the Deaf and Dumb, was committed to Bellevue to-day for examination as to his sanity. He was arrested yesterday for threatening to arrest a woman who had been in One Hundred and Fifty-second street. Magistrate Zeller made inquiries into the case to-day. Chamberlain's mother and sister were in court. They said that the young man had been weak-minded for years and is harmless. Magistrate sent them to Bellevue with their physician, as it was then too late to discharge the prisoner.

"CAR AHEAD" VICTIMS SUE.

The Right of Companies to Change the Destination of Cars at Will to Be Tested in the Courts.

H. E. Cromwell, of No. 231 Broadway, has brought suit against the Interurban Company for damages to his feelings due to the abuse he was subjected to by servants of the company while endeavoring to compel the company to fulfill its contract with him and carry him to Fort George on Tuesday night.

Mr. Cromwell's attorney is Tobias A. Keppier, of No. 61 Park Row. The suit is one of several to be brought by the same lawyer on behalf of persons who were threatened by a conductor and a motorman on Tuesday night.

Soon after 8 o'clock Mr. Cromwell boarded a car at Eleventh street and Sixth avenue bearing a sign "Fort George." He had waited for several cars to go by in order to get a thorough one, and to make sure asked the conductor when he paid his fare.

"Can't you read? Didn't you see the sign?" inquired the conductor, with the urbane politeness of many of his class. "Thank you," said Mr. Cromwell, and took his seat.

At Ninetieth street the car was packed. Persons were in the aisles and nearly all were passengers for Fort George. The conductor announced that the car was not going through, but the crowd could have the pleasure of transferring at One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street. The "Fort George" sign was turned to read something else. At One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street the crowd was forced to pile out. About twenty passengers, headed by Mr. Cromwell, refused to budge. The conductor and the motorman came back to Mr. Cromwell and threatened to throw him off. As the leader of the insurgents objecting to the transfer he was told he would either get off or be thrown off.

The twenty passengers refused to budge and the car was run for a block on a siding and held forty-five minutes. Every little while some one connected with the railroad company would argue with the passengers as to the rights of capital to do what it pleased with the passengers. After this wait the car was run to the barn.

"All out in here now," said an inspector. "The car is broken and it will take four hours to fix it." "Fix it," said the chorus, eight of whom were women. After a delay of fifteen minutes, three minutes of which a workman made a bluff at doing something, the car was pulled from the barn and run to the end of the line at Fort George.

It was decided to employ a lawyer and see what redress the passengers had. Mr. Cromwell, who had been arrested, was released for the want of the employees, was delegated to go as far as he liked by others in the car. At Fifty-ninth street, A. H. Hendrick, of No. 47 Cedar street, G. P. Glavin, of No. 41 Grove street, G. B. Dwyer, No. 225 West End street, Robert H. Smith, No. 290 West Forty-fourth street, William H. Hughes, No. 812 Greenwich street, and J. P. Dougherty and A. Adams, of No. 201 West One Hundred and Sixteenth street.
